Topic: Combining Lean with ISO 9001:2015

Speaker: Tim Renaud
Founder, ISO Support Group Inc.

Ten years ago many companies were proudly displaying their ISO 9001 banners, confident that the International Standard would improve their competitiveness. However, many companies haven't leveraged their system to drive business improvements and now some are putting their faith in Lean Principles instead. Many are doomed to fail, yet again... because they are approaching Lean with the same lack of understanding and commitment as they did with their ISO 9001 system. They have not learned the secret to effective system deployment, and they haven't learned how to effectively integrate quality systems with business operating systems.

The new ISO 9001:2015 represents a major revision from 2008. There is a significant increase in the "shall" requirements embedded within it. It's been 15 years since the last major revision so a lot of renovations likely have been done to your QMS during that time, perhaps making it cluttered and outdated. This major revision is giving you a good reason to re-look at your whole QMS, from top to bottom. So how can these two strategies integrate effectively? Come and discover the answers through an interesting, interactive seminar with the co-author of the business novel Lean 9001 – Battle for the Arctic Rose.
